

ART

How Beautiful Booze Is

by Annie Scott (RSS feed) — Sep 8th 2009 at 4:00PM

BevShots

one doesn't care to see wine or beer or spirits of any kind on their wall, but would you believe that the art above is a magnified image of English oatmeal stout? It's beautiful!

BevShots takes microscopic photos of your favorite vice, be it wine, tequila, or even just cola, blows them up and colors them to make gorgeous modern art, suitable for any home. BevShots just launched in August. Their ready-to-hang pieces range from $199 - $549 (not including shipping and handling) depending on sizing and framing options -- you can get simple prints rolled in a tube for as low as $49.99.

You can shop by color or even by beverage. Visit the website for more info, and check out some fabulous finds in the gallery below!

Gallery: How Beautiful Booze Is

Tags: art, beer, bevshots, spirits, wine

Twitter | Stumble | Tweet Pin

Comments (8)

news	stories
Welcome Bruce Willis to the Neighborhood	The Fashion Statement: Body Armor
First Annual Ferran Hamptons Rally This Weekend	The Ritz-Carlton Golf & Spa Resort, Rose Hall, Jamaica
Art Market Turning? Autumn to Confirm or Deny	Too Good to Be True - Arvedlund's In-Depth Look at Madoff
Yes Saint Laurent's Moroccan Hideaway Up For Sale	Luxist Drives the Aston Martin DBS Volante, and it Gives Convertibles a Very, Very Good Name
Another Real Housewife In Real Estate Trouble	World's Most Expensive Hotel Suites 2009
1938 Auto Union Type D and Others Fail to Sell at Bonhams	Love Studs? Who Doesn't.
Everest Gigayacht Offers to Beat Abramovich by 100 Ft.	Luxist Preview: White - Warren
Big Robbery At London's Graff Jewelers	The Fashion Statement: Everything That's Fit to Print
Suzanne Somers Drops The Price In Palm Springs Again	Say Käse: Leica Debuts New $23,000 S2 Digital SLR Camera
New Law to Prevent Gallery Auctions in New York	The Lofts At Cherokee Studios: Has Elvis Really Left the Building?

“Normally one doesn't care to see wine or beer or spirits of any kind on their wall, but would you believe that the art above is a magnified image of English oatmeal stout? It's beautiful!

BevShots takes microscopic photos of your favorite vice, be it wine, tequila, or even just cola, blows them up and colors them to make gorgeous modern art, suitable for any home. BevShots just launched in August. Their ready-to-hang pieces range from $199 -$549 (not including shipping and handling) depending on sizing and framing options -- you can get simple prints rolled in a tube for as low as $49.99.

You can shop by color or even by beverage. Visit the website for more info, and check out some fabulous finds in the gallery below!” – Luxist.com